The Pandemic Convention We Need Now: A Call to Action
Social Media Toolkit (Embargo: 00:01 EST / 06:01 CEST & SAST / 09:31 IST / 12:01 CST/ Tuesday 12 April 2022)

Background
For more than two years, we have endured a pandemic that could have been prevented. Had the right systems been in place, the world could have entered 2022 looking back at SARS-CoV-2 as a contained outbreak, instead of straining to manage hundreds of millions of new infections.

This cannot and does not have to happen again. This pandemic has shown the necessity of a new international architecture that incentivizes effective preparedness and response, secures mutual assurance, includes disincentives for non-adherence and brings cohesion to a system in disarray.

On Tuesday, 12 April, The Panel for a Global Public Health Convention (GPHC) launched a Call to Action: The Pandemic Convention We Need Now. Through concrete solutions, accountability measures, and governance structures, GPHC propose a clear path forward to dramatically strengthen pandemic prevention, preparedness and response systems by establishing a new Pandemic Treaty.

Our Ask
On 1 December 2021, at a rare Special Session of the World Health Assembly, diplomats started a global process to draft and negotiate a new international pandemic agreement. This decision is now being implemented by an Intergovernmental Negotiating Body (INB) with a two-year mandate to deliver an accord for consideration by the World Health Assembly in May 2024.

Now is the moment for all those involved to take advantage of this historic opportunity to build a healthier and safer world, learn from the last two years, implement evidence-based solutions, and move with haste.

This toolkit contains a series of social media posts and visual assets to help raise awareness about the Panel’s bold set of recommendations for an equitable and accountable Pandemic Treaty and call on leaders to learn more and take action.
You are encouraged to share the below prepared posts on your Twitter and Facebook channels to help amplify the Panel’s Call to Action across social media. Visual assets, including infographics and a series of quote graphics can be paired with the post copy to raise awareness and call on leaders to take action. To help spread the word, please share this toolkit with your networks!
